Drew Hansen serves as Co-Chair of Nossaman’s Employment Group. He is also the Chair of the Firm’s Trucking, Logistics, & Warehouse Industry Group. He periodically serves as a Discovery Referee/Special Master in complex, high-stakes litigation.

Drew is an employment and business litigator specializing in defending employers and companies against wage and hour class actions, consumer fraud class actions, other complex commercial disputes, PAGA actions, individual employment lawsuits of all kinds, breach of contract cases, and unfair business practice claims.

Drew represents both major companies and midsize businesses. He has successfully defended against class certification and won significant victories in a number of notable class action lawsuits in California. He has been successful at resolving cases at summary judgment and has had a significant number of cases dismissed at the pleadings stage.

Drew’s record of success for his clients has been acknowledged by the Daily Journal, which named him one of the “Top 20 Under 40” lawyers in the State of California. Super Lawyers magazine, which profiled his vibrant class action defense practice, named Drew a top rated Class Action & Mass Torts attorney in Southern California in 2020.

In addition to his prolific employment and litigation practice, Drew has developed an expertise serving as a discovery referee/special master. His work in this area includes refereeing depositions, issuing orders on motions to compel, conducting in camera reviews of allegedly privileged documents, and working closely with the court in virtually every aspect of a case. Drew served as one of the court-approved Discovery Masters in the landmark Bratz doll copyright litigation case, Mattel, Inc. v. MGA Entertainment, Inc.

Prior to becoming an attorney, Drew had a successful collegiate basketball career at the University of Utah, where he was a co-captain and started at guard in the 1998 NCAA championship game against the Kentucky Wildcats.
