Bill Powers represents nonprofits, PACs and companies of all sizes, advising them on how to leverage the legal and regulatory landscape to maximize their political and business objectives. Bill's practice lies at the intersection of policy and innovation, helping clients bring to market and advance groundbreaking ideas in politics, digital media and emerging sectors, such as green tech and gov tech. Bill deploys his unique blend of government experience and private sector know-how to resolve clients' matters before government agencies, such as the Federal Election Commission (FEC) and state agencies regulating campaign finance, gift and gratuities, lobbying, ethics and pay-to-play.

Bill's clients include national advocacy organizations, start-up tech ventures, as well as multi-national corporations and their government affairs departments. He also serves as counsel to individuals, ballot measure committees, Super PACs, and tax-exempt, nonprofit organizations, such as 501(c)(3) charities, 501(c)(4) social welfare organizations and 501(c)(6) trade associations.

Bill provides guidance in all aspects of political law, including:

- Federal Election Campaign Act (FECA) and Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act (BCRA or McCain-Feingold);
- Lobbying Disclosure Act (LDA);
- U.S. House and Senate Ethics Rules;
- Financial Disclosure requirements and the STOCK Act;
- Foreign Agents Registration Act (FARA);
- Similar rules at the state, local and municipal level.

Bill's practice also involves internal investigations and white-collar defense, especially those related to election law, bribery, and anti-corruption statutes, such as the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA). He represents clients facing parallel or overlapping criminal and civil investigations, including those before by the Department of Justice (DOJ), FEC, and Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

EXPERIENCE

Helping PACs and Advocacy Campaigns

- Counsel to 2020 Presidential draft committee encouraging popular senator to declare for office;
